TOPOGRAPHIC MAPPING IN ILLINOIS

Expensive Surveys Being Carried on in Co-operation Between the State and Federal Geological Surveys.

Since 1905 the state of Illinois has been co-operating continuously with the federal geological survey in the topographic mapping of parts of the state and as a result about 80 topographic maps of Illinois are now published. Of course there is still much to be done before the entire state will be covered by these maps, for topographic mapping is necessarily expensive and slow, owing to the detail and precision required in all the work from the preliminary control to the printing of the finished map, but without the financial co-operation which the state of Illinois has tendered the federal survey through Frank W. DeWolf, director of the state geological survey, many important areas in this prosperous state must still have remained unmapped.

The unit of survey is a quadrangle measuring one-sixteenth, one-fourth, or one "square degree," according to scale, and the resulting map is a sheet 16 1/2 by 20 inches bearing the name of the "quadrangle" it covers. Practically all cooperative maps in Illinois are on a scale of 1:62,500—that is, a distance of one inch on the map represents 62,500 inches on the ground—or practically one inch to the mile. The relative heights are shown by curved contour lines drawn to represent heights above mean sea level at intervals of either 10 or 20 feet. Eight new Illinois maps have been issued by the United States geological survey, department of the interior, since January 1, 1916, covering a total area of 1,147 square miles, all in co-operation with the state geological survey of Illinois.
